SOMEWHAT ROUGH ON THE DOG.

Charm Worked to Perfection, But Ended Canine's Usefulness.

The new girl paused, and glanced at her recently acquired mistress. This business of polishing silver in profound silence was getting on her nerves. She would endeavor to get it off.

"Ain't it nice to get the laugh on people?" she inquired cheerily.

All her life the mistress had been accused of being too easy with her "girls." This time she would begin aright, so she merely raised her eyebrows and remarked, "Is it?" But the newcomer was chill-proof.

"Oh yes," she continued blithely. "me an' my sister have the laugh on all the people in Jamaica, (that's where my sister lives). You see, her little girl had whooping cough an' everybody said she'd have it 12 weeks."

The mistress remembered hearing a voice, singularly like her own, that had lifted itself up, and proclaimed: "If the employers of domestic help would remember that their maids are human beings and not machines, the servant problem would solve itself." So she felt constrained to ask: "And did she have it all that while?"

"No, she didn't; a lady gave her a cure," she says. "Get up every morning for three days just at dawn. Then pull a hair from the very middle of the baby's head; after that split open a piece of meat and put in the hair. Then tie the meat to a piece of bread an' feed it all to a big black dog. In three days the dog will have the whooping cough an' the baby will be better."

"And was she?" meekly inquired the owner of the silver.

"Sure she was," returned the teller of strange tales.

"And the dog?"

"He coughed so the man in the next house poisoned him."

SEX EVER READY TO FORGIVE.

Telegraph Operator Amused at Usual Ending of Lovers' Quarrel.

One afternoon not long ago a young woman stepped up to the telegraph counter in a local department store, and in a trembling voice asked for a supply of blanks.

She wrote a message on one blank, which she immediately tore in halves; then a second message was written out that was treated in the same way; finally a third was accomplished, and this she handed to the operator with a feverish request that it be "rushed."

When the message had gone on the wire and the sender had departed, the operator read the other two for her own amusement.

The first ran: "All at an end. Have no wish to see you again."

"Do not write or try to see me any more," was the tenor of the second message.

The third was to this effect: "Come at once. Take next train if possible. Answer."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Tabard Inn.

The Tabard inn was an ancient inn, formerly situated in Southwark, London, the traditional hostelry where Chaucer and the other pilgrims met, and with their host discoursed about the manner of their journey to Canterbury. The buildings of Chaucer's time have disappeared, but were standing in 1602. The oldest now remaining is of the age of Elizabeth, and the most interesting portion is a stone colored wooden gallery, in front of which is the picture of the Canterbury pilgrimage, said to have been painted by Blake. Instead of the ancient sign of the Tabard, the ignorant landlord put up about the year 1876 the sign of Talbot, which it now bears.

Piece of Valuable Carpet.

"There is a small piece of carpet in the mint in San Francisco that a good many people would doubtless like to get possession of," remarked R. H. Smith of the California city.

"It is in the adjusting room, where surplus gold is trimmed from the coins after they have been stamped. Of course these little trimmings often drop on the floor and are imbedded in the carpet, which is soon to be burned in order that the precious filings may be recovered. Sometimes after a piece of carpet like this has been burned $5,000 worth of gold dust is taken from the ashes. The sweepings from the floor each day are carefully treasured."

The Tyranny of Custom.

Every human being has natural affections and natural antipathies. Instead, however, of obeying the impulse which makes us pursue the former and avoid the latter, we allow the most intimate relationship in life to be decided by calculating reason. Even in the matter of food and drink, we neither eat when we are hungry nor drink when we are thirsty, but whenever the ringing of a bell summons us to a meal for which we may or may not have the smallest inclination.—The Ladies' Field.

The Root of the Trouble.

A housemaid being questioned as to what girls dislike most in the way of an employer declared that the woman who thinks she knows how to keep house is the most disagreeable woman to work for. Generally she thinks her way the only way and makes life miserable for her maids. The ideal mistress is one, the maid thinks, who has not much faith in her own ability to do work, but is satisfied with ordering, leaving the details to her servants. The maid thinks that when mistresses stop playing at domestic science and other fads the servant question will settle itself.

CAN KNOW THINGS TOO WELL.

Sometimes Too Well Trained a Memory Plays Odd Tricks.

Very often folks get to know a thing so well that they don't have to think to remember it. Take for instance, your home address. If you have been living in the same house in the same street for years your address gets easier and easier to recall. Except, sometimes. It doesn't take the influence of liquor to make you forget, either. It merely is that you know it too well.

There was a man who was in the habit of writing letters to a girl and after a year or so he got to know her address by heart. One day, long after he started writing to her, he was addressing an envelope to the young woman, when suddenly he became suspicious of the number he had written. He read it aloud and tried other schemes of convincing himself. He wrote the same numbers on other sheets of paper, but they did not seem entirely right.

Eventually he had to go over to call on the girl, instead of writing, in order to satisfy himself that he still knew the address. His figures had been perfectly all right, but the trouble was that he knew them too well.

That sometimes occurs to a person giving an address in a store. It slips out so naturally that when by chance the shopman repeats: "Blank Blankety-blank street?" you begin to wonder if you have it right after all. And the first breath of suspicion kills your chances of remembering correctly. You simply have to go to the directory to verify the place you live in, and naturally that leads to suspicions on the part of the shopkeeper.

CIGARETTE MONEY NOT ENOUGH.

D'Annunzio's Contemptuous Rejection of Manager's Offer.

Gabriele d'Annunzio, an Italian poet, maintains a princely villa, a stable of automobiles and disports himself otherwise as becomes a favorite of the muses. Italians rank him nearly among the saints, and the veneration in which he is held extends to the large Italian colony that planted the sort of spirit known as American in the Argentine Republic and made Buenos Ayres the most progressive of South American cities.

An Italian show maestro who had been to Buenos Ayres and found there a lively demand for d'Annunzio proposed to take the poet there on tour to read in public his own poems. He approached d'Annunzio with an offer of $1,000 a night for 20 appearances plus expenses to and from Argentina.

"I think I would rather like to visit Argentina," the poet answered, "and I have no dread of the sea trip to Buenos Ayres, but I don't care to go for the price of a cigarette."

The Credit Mobilier.

In the campaign of 1872 it was charged that the vice-president, the vice-president-elect, the secretary of the treasury, several senators, the speaker of the house and a large number of representatives had been bribed during the years 1867 and 1868 by presents of stock in a corporation known as the Credit Mobilier (organized to contract for building the Union Pacific railroad) to vote and act for the benefit of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. An investigation committee appointed by congress reported February 18, 1873, recommending the expulsion of Oakes Ames of Massachusetts for "selling to members of congress shares of the stock of the Credit Mobilier below their real value, with intent thereby to influence the votes of such members," and of James Brooks of New York for receiving such stock. The house modified the proposed expulsion into an "absolute condemnation" of the conduct of both members.

Movements Shaping Art.

There are at present two definite movements which are clearly shaping the course of American art. One is the movement of expansion, which has fostered the creation of many different and widely distributed centers of interest; the other is the tendency to concentrate official activity in a single typical spot. Owing to the callousness of New York, the retrospective habits of Boston, the avowed internationalism of Pittsburgh and the fact that Philadelphia has always had a special mission to fulfill, these cities must in time give place to some more logical focal point, nor is it a very difficult matter to designate that particular locality.—Century.

Bird of Great Burden.

It was Tommy's first visit to the zoo.

"And what is that, mamma?" he asked, pointing to a queer-looking animal on the edge of a big pool.

"Why, my dear, that is the baby hippo," explained his mother. "The stork brought it last week."

Tommy stared in wonder at the cumbersome little creature and then said:

"Mamma, the next time you want the piano moved why don't you engage the same stork?"

Now "Marianne Islands."

Heretofore the official address of the naval station has been "Guam, Ladrones Islands." It is now, by official order, "Guam, Marianne Islands." "Ladrones" is Spanish for robber, and the inhabitants felt that such a suggestive name did them an injustice.
